SESE - History: (Story)

Tom Crean

Tom Crean was born in Co. Kerry in 1877. When he was 15 years old he joined the British Navy. He worked on many big ships. In 1901 he became interested in exploring the Antarctic. He joined a trip to the South Pole led by Captain Scott. He spent eight months sailing on rough seas during fierce storms. When the ship reached Antarctica it got stuck in the ice. The crew built a wooden hut and stayed there for six months until spring came. Captain Scott led a group, which included Tom Crean towards the South Pole. They turned back when they were less than halfway there because some of the men were too tired.

A few years later Tom Crean went on another trip with Captain Scott. They were racing to the South Pole with Roald Amundsen, a Norwegian explorer. When the crew were 240km from the South Pole, Scott decided that he and only four others would complete the final part of the journey. Tom was not in this group. He headed back to the base camp with two friends. When they were 56km away from the base camp one of the men became very ill. Tom went back to the base camp alone to get help. He walked non-stop for 19 hours without a compass and sleeping bag. When he arrived, he gave directions to the rescue party and his friends were saved. Tom received the Albert Medal for lifesaving. Captain Scott and his group reached the South Pole but died on their way back to base camp. Amundsen had got here one month earlier.

After more adventures in Antarctica Tom Crean returned to Kerry and opened a pub called the South Pole Inn. He lived there with his wife and three daughters.

Draw a picture of what you think the base camp was like. You can draw the inside or outside of the wooden hut.
