SESE - History: (Story)Fionn and the Fianna

Long ago a wise poet named Finnéigeas lived along the bank of the River Boyne. He lived alone and spent his time reading books and writing poetry. The Salmon of Knowledge lived in the River Boyne. It was a huge fish and people said that the first person to taste it would be given the gift of wisdom. One day Fionn, the son of Cumhall came along and spoke to Finnéigeas. Fionn was training to be a warrior and wanted to be the leader of the Fianna one day. The Fianna were an army of brave warriors who protected the High King. Fionn decided to stay with Finnéigeas. Finnéigeas taught him poetry, storytelling and many other skills. Fionn cooked the meals and kept the hut warm and clean. One day Finnéigeas saw the Salmon of Knowledge in the river. He tried to catch it with a net. The salmon was so powerful that if anyone looked into its eyes they would fall into a deep sleep. When the salmon jumped up high into the air it looked into Finnéigeas's eyes and he immediately fell asleep. When Fionn saw what had happened he woke Finnéigeas up but the salmon escaped. Finnéigeas tried to catch the Salmon of Knowledge again and eventually succeeded. Fionn and Finnéigeas cooked the Salmon of Knowledge over the fire. When Finnéigeas went to gather berries Fionn looked after the salmon. He noticed a blister on its back. When he pressed the blister it burst and he burned his thumb. Immediately he put his thumb in his mouth to ease the pain. He had tasted the Salmon of Knowledge by accident and received the gift of Knowledge. When Finnéigeas returned he knew Fionn had tasted the salmon. At first he was disappointed as he really wanted to be the wisest man in Ireland. Afterwards he felt very happy for Fionn.

Fionn went to Tara and joined the Fianna. When he killed the Goblin of Tara he became the leader. The Goblin of Tara was a fiery monster that came to Tara every Samhain. It would make everyone fall asleep by playing music and then burn everything. You may have read the story of how Fionn became the leader of the Fianna in Reading Zone.
